THE wisest and most helpful charity that can be bestowed upon the poor during the cold and inclement winter is to give them work. Of course there are many who are sick and unable to do anything, and for such special provis-ion must be made. "Wanted, work" --of some kind. Even the poorest, if not degraded, lazy, or uttorly disheart-ened, preter honest labor to becoming mere recipients of charity. Work is honorable, and those who can earn the bread they cut feel a self-respect which is inevitably experienced, than if, when able to labor, they cut the bread of charity. Those who have the management of labor bureaus and employment societies, know how painfully carnest is the call for "work, work" even though the pittance likely to be carned is wretchedly small. It is the despairing ory not only for food, but for self-re-spect. Why should honest commend-able pride in one's own ability be utterly crushed out by a mere gift-kindly mant, but unwise-when helping for tew weeks might lift the burden, raise the sinking spirits, and rekindle the oxpiring spark of manhood? If it should be the conscientious effort of every benevolent man and weman to give or find employment for the ablebodied destitute poor, the whole community would reap the benefit. This, of course, must often be done indirectly -through societies and missions to which contribution must be made. But in some ways to give work to the needy is a far nobler charity than to give them money. ALLEGED NEW CEREAL.

A new coreal has been grown in the State of Oregon, and thus far no one has been able to classify it, for while it bears a general resemblance to wheat yet its stalk, mede of growth, and its heavy filaments cause it to be taken for rye or barley by the most experienced farmers. The grain, was originally dis-covered in the stemach of a wild goose by a farmer. From seven to ten stalks sping from one root, and attain a hight, when ripe, of four and a half to five foct. NEARLY overy Democratic Journal or orator, who has taken occasion to criticise the speech of Mr. Blaine on the restoration of Jeff. Davis to his forfeited political rights, have taken the cue given them by Sunset Cox, and have spoken of Mr. Blaine as a candidate for the Presidency. There is not a word in that speech, however, on the subject of the Presidency. The merits or demerits of the speech stand on their own bottom, and neither oun be answered or set aside by charging the author with being an aspirant to Presidential honors. Mr. Blaine has as much right to sock to be President as James Buchanan and Stephen A. Douglas ever had to do the same; but the charge that he is a candidate, instead of having any bearing upon his arguments, is a confession on the part of their authors that they are unable to answer him in any other way. Whather the people of this nation may choose to cleat Mr. Blaine President or not, we will not presume to say; but that he is a leader whom the Confederates have rousen to fear, they have already learned .- Springfield Journal.

A loader is argently wanted by the Democratic party, because they will not be able to maintain the semblance of an opposition unless they do tetter than they have done. They will be unworthy each of contempt, if, after opposing every Republican act, every Republican principle and every Republican method for the past fourteen years, they can find no better defense of their acts and methods than to say: ' We are just doing what you did." It seems as if long habit in the policy of mere negation had deprived them of the power of originating anything, and even of originating a defense, and when called upon to net, they can do nothing more than imitate acts they opposed. This is not the course per the method by which a party keeps another party opposition, in check, and if the Demecratic party can do no better than ascribe personal motives to its opponents, and adopt the tactics against which they claimed that their existence was a protest, their existence will not outlive the single Congress in which they have accidentally and most unfor tunately obtained a majority that they are unable to use .- Globe Demo Evansville Journal. The result of the discussion will, we think, prove that the leaders of the Democracy "blundered." The party had nothing whatever to gain by its championship of Jeff. Davis, while there was a possibility of losing a good deal by again arousing the spirit of the North. The discussion can hardly have any other result, for thousands of people who are really desirous of "forgiving and forgotting the origin of the reballion and its terrible consequences, are not altogether prepared to go the laugth of apothousizing all of the men engaged in it.

The country has had enough—nay, great deal too much-of Mr. Jefferson Davis, Mr. Robert Toombs, and seven hundred and fifty disabled assoorates, in its polities. Their participation in political affairs has pover done the country any good, but, on the contrury, has done it a great deal of harm. The Confiderate scheme to drag these rotten and turbulent old pro slavery corpses back into our political life is overy way reprehensible.
